EXPLANATION OF GOD- BY AN 8 YR OLD

One of God's jobs is making people. He makes them to replace the ones that die, so there will be enough people to take care of things on earth. He doesn't make grown-ups, just babies. I think because they are smaller and easier to make. That way He doesn't have to take up His valuable time teaching them to talk and walk. He can just leave that to mothers and fathers.

God's second most important job is listening to prayers. An awful lot of this goes on, since some people, like preachers and things, pray at times beside bedtime. God doesn't have time to listen to the radio or TV because of this. Because He hears everything, there must be a terrible lot of noise in His ears, unless He has thought of a way to turn it off.

God sees everything and hears everything and is everywhere which keeps Him pretty busy. So you shouldn't go wasting His time by going over your Mom and Dad's head asking for something they said you couldn't have.

Atheists are people who don't believe in God. I don't think there are any in our town. At least there aren't any who come to our church. Jesus is God's Son. He used to do all the hard work like walking on water and performing miracles and trying to teach the people who didn't want to learn about God. They finally got tired of Him preaching to them and they crucified Him. But He was good and kind, like His Father and He told His Father that they didn't know what they were doing and to forgive them and God said OK.

His Dad (God) appreciated everything that He had done and all His hard work on earth so He told Him He didn't have to go out on the road anymore. He could stay in Heaven. So He did. And now He helps His Dad out by listening to prayers and seeing things which are important for God to take care of and which ones He can take care of Himself without having to bother God. Like a secretary, only more important.

You can pray anytime you want and they are sure to help you because they got it worked out so one of them is on duty all the time.

You should always go to church because it makes God happy, and if there's anybody you want to make happy, it's God. Don't skip church or do something you think will be more fun like going to the beach. This is wrong. And besides the sun doesn't come out at the beach until noon anyway.

If you don't believe in God, besides being an atheist, you will be very lonely, because your parents can't go everywhere with you, like to camp, but God can. It is good to know He's around you when you're scared in the dark or when you can't swim and you get thrown into real deep water by big kids.

But... you shouldn't just always think of what God can do for you. I figure God put me here and He can take me back anytime He pleases. And... That's why I believe in God.

Which Bible Version Should I Read?

Or maybe, which Bible version should I NOT read? I certainly have my preferences, and I don't want to be judgmental or legalistic about it, but you need to be careful the next time you go shopping for a Bible.

The new New International Version (or 2011 NIV), published by Zondervan, is a Bible we should stay away from, and as a church, our leadership cannot endorse it. I'm not sure why the publishers felt they had to update the 1984 version. Our language hasn't evolved that much in the last 25 years or so, has it?

In an effort to be all inclusive, should I say politically correct, they have blurred gender pronouns and confused singular and plural pronouns. Brother becomes brother and sister. He becomes them or they. Psalm 8:4 in the NIV 1984 reads 'what is man that you are mindful of him, the son of man that you care for him?' The NIV 2011 reads 'what is mankind that you are mindful of them, human beings that you care for them?' This totally removes the Messianic flavor that the phrase 'son of man' holds, which Jesus used to describe himself! There are lots, lots more examples that there are not room for here.

Well, does that really change the meaning of the text? It definitely does when it substitutes a plural pronoun for 'he' in order to be all inclusive. It changes a very personal pronoun (our God is a personal God) into a nebulous pronoun that makes one part of a large, impersonal group. Even if that is the intent of the original (and a good teacher can express that), it changes God's word as it was written. In my opinion, it goes beyond translating into a modern language to pandering to gender inclusiveness.

The publishers claim that in over 95% of the text it preserves the time tested reliability of the 1984 NIV. How do you feel having 5% of your Bible changed? However, that statement may not be entirely accurate. One study found that only 61% of the verses in the 2011 NIV are the same as the 1984 NIV. I guess saying we have changed 40% of your beloved NIV would not be a major selling point.

Why is this a big deal? If you are willing to change God's word a little bit now to be politically correct, what will you change in the future as political pressure increases? Once the camel gets his nose in the tent, it is hard to keep him from going all the way in and tearing down the tent in the process.

Yes, but wouldn't women welcome the revised language? Not if they are serious Bible students and care if the translation is true to the original. And not if they don't like condescension. Blurring the Bible's gender language contributes to the blurring of gender distinctions. It diminishes and devalues the unique role and beauty of womanhood. Are women so stupid that they can't figure out the places that 'man' refers to 'humanity' or 'mankind' or that they are usually included when the term brothers is used? I don't think so, but apparently the publishers do. Or perhaps they just think that women are so fragile that their feelings will be hurt by not being included. Isn't that rather patronizing?

So what do we do? If you have a 1984 NIV, by all means, continue to use it. It is very readable and is a good thought for thought translation of the Bible. The problem is, the publisher is no longer producing the 1984 NIV. That means if you buy a new Bible, unless the store has old stock, you will be getting the 2011 NIV. Make sure you check the copyright date and ask a sales attendant before purchasing. The pew Bibles at church are the 1984 NIV, so no problem there.

What about other versions? It depends on what you want to use it for. There are many good versions out there that really don't differ that much. Pick one that is readable yet true to the original. Be careful you don't accidentally pick up a Book of Mormon or a Jehovah's Witness Bible (The New World Translation). You wouldn't find these at a good Christian bookstore, but might find it at a secular bookstore, garage sale or thrift store. You won't want the New Jerusalem Bible or any other Catholic Bible. The Catholic Bible contains books that are not accepted as scripture by Protestants. If you see a Bible with the book of Tobit or Judith or Maccabees, then it is probably a Catholic Bible and you should avoid it.

What about the King James only folks? A quick internet search will unearth a lot of people who think the KJV is the only Bible approved by God and all the other Bible translations are tools of Satan. I disagree heartily. The KJV is derived from texts (the Textus Receptus) that are more numerous, but are farther removed from the date of original writing. The NIV, NASB and others are translated from the Critical Text, which have been discovered more recently due to technological advances in archeological methods. There are fewer of these texts, but they are much closer to the date of original writing. This causes many scholars to believe they are more accurate. I am OK with either one. My beef with the KJV is it is very hard to read aloud. Since we don't talk like that, we stumble over words as we read it. It is also very hard to understand since people spoke differently and words have different meanings than they did 400 years ago. (continued on back page)

What good is a Bible if you don't understand what you read? If you like it and understand it, then by all means, read it. The New King James Version is a more modern translation of the KJV.

The New American Standard Bible (NASB) is probably the closest word for word translation from the Greek to English. It makes for a very good study Bible. It is what I like to use when I teach. The New Living Translation is very readable. It is more of an idea by idea translation. It would be good to get a general idea of what the Bible is saying, but not very good if you wanted to do word studies. I would stay away from The Message Bible completely. I think it just takes too many liberties trying to be hip and relevant. If you want an easy to read bible, stick with the NLT.

A more recent translation that I am investigating is the Holman Christian Standard Bible. The jury is still out on that one as far as I'm concerned, but it could be promising. With all the translations out there, here are some things to be careful of. Don't find a translation that says what you want it to in order to make a point.

I felt like Rick Warren did this in his Purpose Driven books.

RETURN SERVICE REQUESTED

He would need a key word to make a point and search a bunch of translations until he found the one that had the exact word he wanted. Also, when reading study Bibles, all those notes at the bottom of the pages are written by fallible men (scholars, yes, but not perfect), not the infallible God. Read them as such and don't take the study notes for the gospel truth.

Finally, don't let all the translations scare you away from Bible reading. We need to be in God's word daily. Find a trustworthy Bible that you like, grab a cup of coffee (or your beverage of choice), find a quiet spot and dig into God's word. It is a diamond mine of truth, wisdom, hope, joy and love. It is the most valuable thing you could ever own.

Mike

Safety First!

Are you looking for a way to serve in a ministry that is kind of behind the scenes? We may have the perfect spot for you. The church needs to have a Safety Contact Person to evaluate the church for safety issues and recommend and facilitate the changes that need to be made. He or she would be under the umbrella of the building ministry of the church. If you are interested, contact Mike.
